Introducing . . . CINEMACUTIES

The premiere edition of "CINEMACUTIES" presents a bold and daring — not to mention hilarious — departure from any other publishing venture heretofore attempted. It marks the first time that exciting still pictures from the most sensational movies being shown on American and foreign screens have been accompanied by ribald, riotous (and totally incongruous) captions.

The motion pictures represented in this magazine are, for the most part, well made and skillfully produced. The reader must keep in mind, however, that ours is a tongue-in-cheek approach, and that the captions have nothing whatsoever to do with the scene represented or the actual plot or story of the motion picture. (And we take this opportunity to extend our apologies to the various producers and distributors of these films for our merciless lampooning of their excellent products).

"Secret Society," from which we have appropriated the material for our own "Satana Faces Life," is actually a hard-hitting documentary which lays bare the shocking secrets of America's sex club syndicate. Through the use of hidden cameras and tape recorders, its producers have blasted the lid off an underground sex organization which headquarters in New York City. "Secret Society" achieves a searing degree of realism, at the same time offering some of the most incredible scenes ever captured by a movie camera.

"A Smell of Honey, A Swallow of Brine" is another excellent film from which we "borrowed" to bring you this publication. It is a fearless new movie that scorches the screen with unprecedented candor, as it tells the story of a cunning female cannibal who devours every man in her path. Our cover was taken from "Love Is a Four Letter Word," another new picture which tells of a voyeur's odyssey through the dark corridors of emotional torment. It is a bold kind of love story, a different kind of love story which is now playing to capacity audiences all over the country.

Our centerspread was lifted from "Mondo Freud," a startling new documentary film which dares to probe some dark corners of the world of sex which exist today around the world. Two more excellent films which are used in this publication are "The Girl from S.I.N.," the story of a deadly female secret agent who kills with love, and "Banned," a picture which contains scenes that at one time had to be left on the cutting room floor.

The list goes on and on, and space prevents us from mentioning all of the motion pictures that are represented in this publication. As you read through this collector's edition of "CINEMACUTIES," keep in mind that we're only kidding. Have yourself a good laugh. Then go out and see these movies in a theater. You'll soon see that the various producers weren't kidding — they've created some sensational, top-notch entertainment.

Pictorial memoirs from the star of America's favorite soap opera, "SATANA FACES LIFE"

SATANA'S SCRAPBOOK

“HI THERE, FOLKS! My name is Satana, and I'm the star of America's favorite television soap opera, “Satana Faces Life”—the program which answers the question, ‘Can a swinging girl over 21 stay out of trouble when she's all the time out trying to find it? Over the years we've had so many cards and letters from our viewers asking for photographs of myself and other members of the cast that we decided to put this scrapbook together to satisfy everyone. On the following pages are my favorite scenes from the program, shot right on the set by our photographer (who died recently of the black plague). But anyway, these are my favorite pictures from the show. I hope you enjoy them too.”

“Swinging parties have always been very popular on ‘Satana Faces Life,’ and these photos here are typical. ‘A’ shows a crowd scene with many of my friends. I’m somewhere in the picture, but you can’t see me. In ‘B’ my friend Griselda, who is in the center of the picture, is wearing her brand-new rubber jumper. At another party, Griselda was not wearing her new rubber jumper (‘C’). In this scene she really made the laugh track break up when she walked over to the couple that was busy on the chair and said, ‘Got a match?’”

“This is one of my favorite scenes—the one where I do the famous Snake Ritual with my friend the Snakelady. She has appeared in quite a few episodes of the series, and always makes a big hit. That’s me on the left, by the way, chained to the fireplace. The producer said that would give the scene more realism. That man standing there in the white robe with all the funny symbols on it used to be on the ‘Ben Casey’ show, and he borrowed the robe from them. That lady in the dark robe giving me the big hug is not Snakelady, but another girl in the cast who is part of the Snake Ritual. It was a fun scene!”

 "The girl giving the massage here is Wolfbane Smith, a girl who really knows how to rub it in (ha, ha!). She has played various parts in the series, and in this scene she is giving the treatment to Boris, one of my many boy friends, who needed some revitalizing on this particular evening. Wolfbane is a very beautiful girl, as you can see from her pictures."

 "This is one of the little comedy routines that we throw into the show occasionally. Two girls meet in the hall and one says to the other as she opens her blouse, 'What absolutely beautiful lining, my dear!' That's picture 'A'. In 'B', the girl with the blouse lays down on the floor and says to the other, 'Tell me a funny fairy tale.'

And in 'C', the blonde is saying to the brunette,
'Did you tell your mother you were going to stay out late?' Isn't that a positive breakup case?!"

C

"One of the funniest characters in our cast is my Aunt Necrofilly. She has a great sense of humor, both on the screen and off. In this segment of our show she is spanking Maude Burnbottom because Maude violated one of the rules in the little parlor game they were playing on the show. And you see the shot where Maude is on the floor and Aunt Necrofilly is standing over her? Well, my aunt had a great line that broke everybody up. She said: 'And if you can't behave, I'll turn you back into a frog!' Isn't that a gas?"

“Here’s a very exciting scene from one of our recent episodes. Several of the girls, including Wolfbane Smith, decided to play Cowboys and Indians. The Indians tied up all the cowboys to a table, and then did a little war dance. Then they went off to have a powwow, leaving the cowboys tied up. But the Indians were also practical jokers, according to the script, and they vamoosed and left the cowboys tied up. The rest of the scene was concerned with the cowboys trying to escape from the ropes, and boy! It was really exciting!”

"These are some of the girls in the cast, plus a shot of me with the producer of the show, Jim Bondage. He's the one wearing sunglasses. See the girl pulling up her stocking? She plays my Aunt Flagella. The two girls standing together in their undies by the fireplace are Leslie and Bianca, two regulars in the series. The girl lying down with the wild look on her face plays the part of Madge Hungup, another regular."

"Well, that's my little scrapbook, folks. Wasn't it a gas?! I hope you had as much fun thumbing through it as I did in making the series. Don't fail to miss 'Satana Faces Life' on your TV screen. It's the show that answers the burning question, 'What in the hell is going on here?!?' "

Cinemacuties

"Cut! Cut! Damn it, I said . . . !"

"Say lady, have you got a fishing permit?"

"Honey, I think he said 'cue it,' not 'chew it.' "

"You sure know a lot about sunburn for a milkman!"

"Those boys are watching you pick your nose."

"I wonder if I should tell him I forgot to take my pill."

"I told you if you got fresh the bogey man would get you!"

ABSOLUTELY NO HOUSE CALLS!

"You say you threw it out of place doing the jerk, Miss Appleby?"

Another legend of "The Good Old Days" has nearly passed into extinction: the kindly old doctor who would come running to your home in the dead of night in a blinding blizzard to tell you that the baby would be all right after he swallowed a handful of golf balls. Today, every doctor is a specialist—and if one does acquiesce to make a house call, it costs you an arm and a leg. Nevertheless, the doctor is as important a part of the American scene as baseball and television (?). This brief but happy section is devoted to the friendly neighborhood sawbones, and it can be read in the time it takes to swallow two aspirin and call him in the morning.

*"As your psychiatrist, Miss Hawkins, I'm certain
I can cure you of your nymphomania."*

"Now whatever you do, don't pull this cork."

"Yes, Miss Harcourt, there IS a cavity in that upper molar."

"You were right, Miss Finley. Your glands are a little swollen."

A major part of the American way of life is this country's hangup with the boob tube—that vast, vast wasteland that most of us wallow in during an inordinate number of our waking hours. With all the pap that is hurled at us from the big eye, it is inevitable that in the near future our benumbed brains will be declared a disaster area. But television offers one consolation . . . the commercials. These are the 60-second intermissions that provide us the opportunity to rush to the refrigerator to grab a cold one so that we may endure the next 12 minutes of mediocrity. This section is devoted to the millions of bleary-eyed Americans who would rather trade a headache for an upset stomach.

"Hel-l-o-o-o, all you tigerrrrs out there . . . so how's your dandruff?"

THE 60-SECOND INTERMISSION

"Of course I use my new Lady Schtick every morning! Doesn't everybody?"

"Take it easy, honey. I'll run in and get you an Alfa Saltzer."

"I get underarm protection all day with ice-cool Acrid!"

*" . . . and smokers all over America are discovering the fresh, cool taste of menthol M.J.'s
 . . . the RELAXING cigarette in the plain brown wrapper."*

"Oh Harry, you've been using those worn-out (beep!) blades again!"

*"And to think that we were college classmates. Look at her . . .
and at me . . . must be that crummy hair rinse . . ."*

"Well, before I started taking Excessrin I used to get a lot of headaches. Now I just get migraines."

"Maybe . . . maybe I should change to a different mouthwash . . ."

"You may not believe this, but my name is Granny Goose."

should take off your utility belt?"*

"You did WHAT in the brook?!?"

"Do you really think practice makes perfect?"

I WISH TO HELL SHE'D LEAVE ME ALONE SO I COULD WATCH

"I can always tell when you've had a rough day at the office!"

"Gee, Mr. Glickman, are you sure your wife doesn't mind?"

"... and the next time you bring your boss home with you, I wish you'd call first!"

"And by the power vested in me by the state of New Jersey, I now pronounce you . . ."

"But all I said was the coffee tasted a little bitter this morning . . . !"

"Uh, honey, you know that loose step I asked you to fix last week?"

Still More Cinemacuties

"That was fine, Miss Chapman, just fine . . . but I wish that one of these days you'd learn to type."

"Enough of this 'just one more kiss, Miss Jones' business, Mr. Patagorsky! When do we sign the movie contract?"

A CHILD'S GARDEN OF THE PERVERSE

"It is a tragedy of life," a wise old sage once said, "that youth is wasted on the young." What he really meant was that we wished we knew then what we know now. Hindsight notwithstanding, we have dedicated this department to the wonderful world of youth—a happy, bubbling, carefree world of merriment and hedonistic joy. Behind this illusion is the real truth: that this world is fraught with conflict and problems, and that youth is a time of desperately trying to cope with the complex world we live in. This truth is somewhat reflected in this tongue-in-cheek look at a child's garden of the perverse side of life.

"Daddy, would you please hand me my yellow duck?"

"Hi, kids. I just dropped over to invite you to my brother's bar mitzvah."

"Oh hi, mom and dad. I'd like you to meet Melvin."      "Damn it, Virginia, there is no Santa Claus!"

"Would you like to buy some Girl Scout cookies?"

"I think my braces are caught on your earring."

"Okay pop, okay! Can I mow the lawn later?"

" . . . and this little piggy went 'wee wee wee wee' all the way home."

"Shhh . . . Don't slam the door, Harold. I think the kids are asleep."

"Gee whiz, momsy will never believe me about THIS day camp!"

"Don't cry, sweetheart, maybe your next report card will be better."

"But Daddy, don't you think I'm old enough to go to a drive-in?"

"Ah . . . listen, sis. Don't you think it's time we asked mom for separate bedrooms?"

"That's MY blanket!"

"But Fairy Godmother, I DID get home by midnight!"

And Still More Cinemacuties

"You touch me six more times and I'll scream!"

"Stick 'em out! ... I mean up!"

"Hey, you weren't kidding. It IS caught in a bear trap!"

"Okay, hand 'em over, Thelma. I need 'em for the next act."

"... A little bit to the left ... no, lower ... now a little higher ... no, a little more to the right ..."

"... and Gladys told me that she wears Bermuda shorts to the supermarket!"

"Achoo!"

The man who says that American movie-makers are showing scenes on the screen that were unheard of a decade ago should take a long, long look back . . . all the way back to the Thirties. In these depression-ridden years, independent producers were putting out pictures that are eye-ball-scorchers even by today's standards. The term "purient interests" hadn't even been coined back in those days, although the censoring Hays Office was born during this era. However, the Hays Office had nothing to do with the little independent producers, and during the middle Thirties about 200 "hot" movies were released for consumption in U. S. theaters. Five such pictures are "Slaves in Bondage," "Narcotic" ("The Pusher"), "Sex Maniac," "Teen Age," and "Elysia," the first nudist movie, which are herewith revived in this special section. When these movies were produced in the Thirties, they were seriously made by capable movie-makers. But by contemporary standards, they come off as high camp. If they ever make a comeback, however, they're well worth seeing.

"Did you say water or soda, my dear?"

"Try not to laugh at her. She hasn't learned how to smoke the thing yet."
